

For immediate release

Wednesday, November 12, 2008

---

McNab receive Women in Development award

Toowoomba-based Construction and Property Development Company McNab has received significant recognition at the Women in Development Excellence Awards.

The WID Excellence Awards are an initiative of the Urban Development Institute of Australia enabling women to gain recognition of their achievements and encourage them to enter the industry.

McNab is the first recipient of the inaugural Workplace Award which recognises a company that supports the career progression of women through a supportive workplace culture and family friendly policies.

McNab offers employees opportunities for career progression, training and development as well as flexibility to achieve a work/life balance.

Managing director Michael McNab attributes the success of female staff to the company's strong emphasis on the growth and development of people.

"Being a family-friendly culture is a real retention and attraction strategy for McNab, adding to the positive working environment for all employees within the organisation," Mr McNab said.

"Currently, 38% of senior management positions are held by women and they all play an integral part in the day-to-day operation of the company."

McNab Corporate Development and People Manager Mark Casey said the company had worked very hard to build a positive work culture helping women contribute more readily to their success.

"This is a tremendous recognition for us in the development industry, we were one of the first companies in our industry to introduce paid maternity leave and this award shows that we are certainly on the right track," Mr Casey said.

The award is another major achievement for the company coming after their success at the Queensland Master Builder Awards and Australian Human Resource Institute Awards earlier this year.

Mr McNab attributed the awards to the hard work and dedication of the company's staff members in each of the Toowoomba, Brisbane and Townsville offices.

(more...)

“At all the levels, the dedication and enthusiasm that each staff member brings to the job is what enables the company to go from strength to strength,” Mr McNab said.

“I am extremely proud to be associated with the high-calibre of staff working at McNab.”

Ends...

For more information please contact Mark Casey on (07) 4620 0700